B. Form in Which Opinion Requests Should Be Made

2. All requests must contain a clear, concise question of law and a complete statement of the facts describing the situation out of which the legal issue arises. The Attorney General will not seek out the facts or infer the question from enclosed correspondence. All requests should name a person whom the staff of the Attorney General may contact to discuss the request.

4. For a particularly difficult and important question of law, officials should resort to a declaratory judgment action whenever practicable, and the Attorney General may recommend this or other courses of action that may be more appropriate than the issuance of an opinion.

D. Miscellaneous Provisions

Officers requesting opinions and interested private parties or other governmental agencies may submit memoranda of law and policy and other statements and material for the consideration by the Attorney General. Such material should be submitted to the attention of the Opinions Bureau in the Springfield office of the Attorney General.

6. In order for the Attorney General to act in the best interests of the public and the State, all guidelines are subject to exception where special circumstances can be shown to warrant an exception.
